

Thank you for your interest in my script. In the event you are also interested in the history of how this all came together, this page will give you a little background.

A friend introduced me to an aspiring Hollywood actor-producer-director. He encouraged me to write a one hour pilot script based on my novel. The script was to be the basis for a proposed TV series. At his request I also prepared a 5 season treatment (that consists of a description of each of 12 episodes making up the first season and a general description of each of the next 4 years). He assured me he had ready access to the decision makers at major network studios and they had asked him to help them find a powerful series with the potential to run for five seasons.

In fact I believe he was simply hopeful that such things could happen. Self-deception may be a necessary attribute to would be actors, directors and producers in Hollywood.

He appeared to be in that category and I knew the probability of him getting a major studio to seriously consider my script was a long shot. But, in fact, I wanted to write the script so I did work to make it happen. And I continue to believe it could be a terrific series . . . or a movie. And I have taken long shots before.

I have recently made some changes that have improved the script and I hope friends and fans of the novel will help me discover someone who will help this script, or another I may write for a movie version, reach a wider audience.
